Fines up to $1,000 Per Day Per Sign!

Various cities and counties, as well as the state, have asked for GHBA's cooperation in controlling the use of directional signs, also known as "bandit signs."

The proliferation and illegal placement of these signs in public rights-of-way have once again become problems. Various citizen groups are pressuring the government to enforce the laws. The fines are potentially enormous with penalties up to $500 per day per sign in the City of Houston alone.

These signs are legal on private property only. The GHBA board of directors passed resolutions in 1998, 2001 and 2004 urging members to cooperate with local authorities and abide by all applicable laws. This is a reminder.
